

It's that time of the year, officially Spring, and we have all entered a very busy season as we head into the final weeks of the academic year. Yes, both for students navigating their educational journeys and for those of us working to improve the systems that serve them. As we nationally highlight Community College Month, there are so many reasons to celebrate and to remain firmly focused.

Closer to home, let us recognize and join in as we celebrate the 50th anniversary of the Triton College radio station (WRRG) on April 28th. Since our first broadcast, we have been a non-commercial radio station dedicated to delivering diverse music, campus news and local events to our listeners. My appreciation to students, faculty, staff and volunteers who have shaped the station's legacy.

Are you feeling restless as the semester is close to finishing? I am. For me, my restlessness continues to drive me to encourage our college to make meaningful changes that break down inequitable systems and ensure students are on a pathway to graduation. I hope that you see your efforts making the difference in the lives of our community. Guided Pathways, an equity-focused framework for forging clear paths and removing obstacles continues to fuel my restlessness for continuous improvement.

For those in our campus community who have engaged for the past couple of years on researching, building and evolving around the 8-week course concept, I say thank you. There is so much for all of us to educate ourselves and stay informed about why this matters, thus I hope you will take time to view this video and continue to pursue your efforts for student success.
