Transferring Ideas into Scientific Discoveries

At Triton College, students are learning across life sciences and physical sciences with the opportunity to actively conduct innovative research. With Triton's state-of-the-art classrooms and lab facilities, students are diving into real-world scientific exploration – transforming scientific ideas into discoveries.

Dr. Turner works with Andrew Ek, a geology student on an X-ray fluorescence analyzer

Dr. Sheldon Turner, chair of Triton's Science Department, said the college's Physical and Life Science Undergraduate Student Lab – known as the PLUS Lab – provides students with the right tools and guidance to conduct university-level research.

With the PLUS Lab, students “have a chance to conduct quality research in their first years of college, where at a four-year university they would need to wait until their junior or senior year and compete for positions in a lab,” said Dr. Turner.

“There is a stigma that community colleges don't do research because we only teach introductory courses, but all of (Triton's) faculty were researchers at one point in their career,” said Dr. Turner, adding that most faculty in Triton's Science Department “have PhD research degrees and are excited to mentor students.”

Dr. Turner served as a mentor for Andrew Ek, a student majoring in geology. Thanks to an X-ray fluorescence analyzer – an instrument not used in a typical classroom – Ek was able to perform research on limestone, an ancient rock that formed millions of years ago. According to Dr. Turner, XRF technology “lets us measure the exact amount of an element in any substance we test, such as rocks, soil, food or metals.” This technology is made available at Triton's PLUS Lab.

Following his research, Ek presented his study – “Comparative biogeochemical analysis of modern tufa and Ordovician dolostone source utilizing X-ray fluorescence spectroscopy” – at the 2024 John S. Albazi Student Research and Creative Activities Symposium held at Northeastern Illinois University (NEIU).

In describing the study, Dr. Turner said northern Illinois is covered with limestone “from back when the state was a tropical coral reef near the equator. There are quarries all over Illinois, where this rock is mined to be turned into cement and concrete for our roads and buildings.”

Ek was searching through one of these quarries for these ancient marine fossils and came across a strange rock called Tufa, which forms in fresh water instead of the ocean, said Dr. Turner.

“Upon closer inspection, this Tufa was full of seeds, bugs and material that appeared to be modern (less than 100 years old). We studied the fossils of the limestone and the objects in the Tufa to confirm their ages and then used the XRF to study the chemical differences between the two rocks.”

Ek’s research would normally require “a university lab and isn’t something many community college students would ever have access to without something like the PLUS Lab,” said Dr. Turner, who co-authored the article, The Benefits of Empowering Community College Geoscience Faculty in Eos, a science magazine of Advancing Earth and Space Sciences (AGU).

Dr. Gabriel Guzman

In addition to Ek, Triton biotechnology students Alexandra Csercse, Sasha Spain, Gennevie Garcia, Michael Elyafi, Diana Zapata and Jeffrey Capilli, mentored by Triton instructor Dr. Gabriel Guzman, also presented at NEIU. The title of their presentation was “Artificial Sweeteners Do Not Induce Adipogenesis in The Absence of Proadipogenic Inducers in 3T3-L1 Cells.”

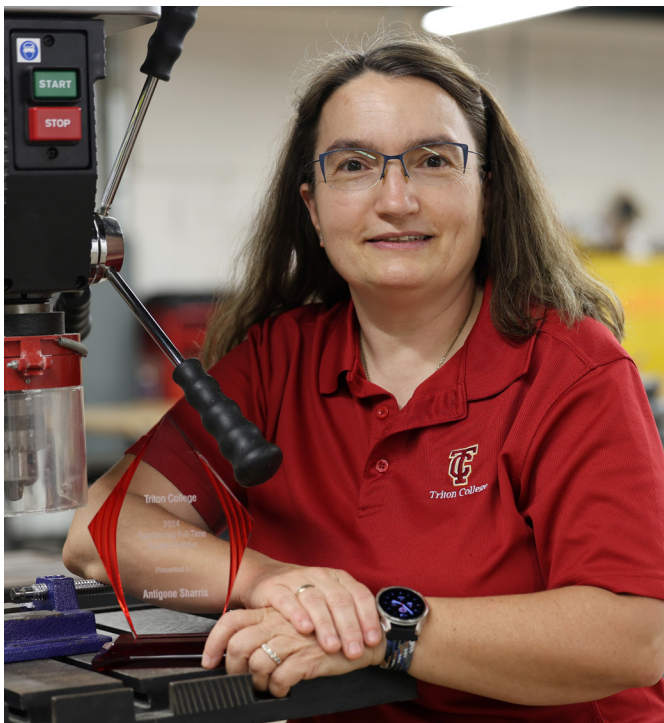

The students set out to investigate the effects of the most common sweeteners used in the United States, according to Dr. Guzman. With Triton’s biotech lab, “we researched cells when introduced to these sweeteners and if they accumulate fat. We found that these cells do accumulate fat,” said Dr. Guzman. “However, we found that there was no difference between artificial and normal sweeteners.”

“It took a lot of trial and error,” said microbiology student Michael Elyafi. “We eventually found our answer.”

Celebrating Excellence in the Classroom

Antigone Sharris, Faculty of the Year

Antigone Sharris, full-time faculty and chair of Triton College's Engineering Technology, received the Outstanding Faculty of the Year Award. The award recognizes college faculty who have gone above and beyond in teaching, mentorship and service, making a significant impact on both students and colleagues. "This award feels very humbling," said Sharris.

"The most rewarding part about my job is the students. It is so gratifying to hear when a student earned a degree and found a job. I want them to find success."

– Antigone Sharris

Sharris is also contact advisor for the Chi Zeta Chapter of Phi Theta Kappa and leads youth-based programs in STEM. She earned a Master of Science in industrial operations and management from the Illinois Institute of Technology and a Bachelor of Science in occupational and practice arts education from the University of Illinois Urbana-Champaign.

Marina Demos, adjunct psychology instructor, received the Outstanding Adjunct Faculty of the Year Award. "I feel beyond grateful," said Demos.

"Our Triton students make teaching such a pleasure."

– Marina Demos

Demos has taught at Triton since 2001 and earned a Master of Science in clinical psychology from Concordia University Chicago.

Every degree-seeking student should create an academic program plan during their first semester on campus. An academic plan outlines the courses you plan on taking each semester until you graduate or complete your planned program of study. You will reach a higher level of success if you have an academic plan that tracks your progress towards completing your degree requirements. Academic plans allow you to view all of your requirements for your degree at a glance and in recommended order to ensure you fulfill all prerequisites.

An Education for Every Generation

Continuing Education Center for Health Professionals (CECHP)

Enroll at the one school that is recognized throughout the Chicago area for its long-standing reputation of preparing top quality professionals with the skills and compassion needed in today's health care environment. Designed with the input of practitioners in the field and more affordable than similar training offered elsewhere, Triton's programs offer students the latest knowledge and clinical experience in actual health care settings to practice at increasingly higher levels of excellence. Classes are offered at convenient times for working professionals.

Short-Term Professional Training

Need to update/upgrade skills for your current job or re-enter the workforce in a new position? Short-term training programs, many of which are unique to Triton, provide the background needed for success in a variety of occupations, including users of computer software, office executive, general office clerk, bank teller, pharmacy technician, certified nursing assistant, paralegal and bookkeeping.

Online Learning

We offer world-class, self-paced online and live online career certificate and certification programs that prepare individuals for national certification examinations. These non-degree bearing courses include all supplies, course materials and books required for course success.

For more information on the School of Continuing Education, visit triton.edu/ce.

Center for Business and Professional Development (CBPD)

Triton is committed to helping area businesses train, retrain and upgrade the skills of their workers necessitated by technological advancements or changing industry regulations. On-site training programs are available or can be developed based on your organization's specific needs and are taught by instructors who have direct experience in your industry. Public seminars and workshops on topics of current business interest are also conducted throughout the year.

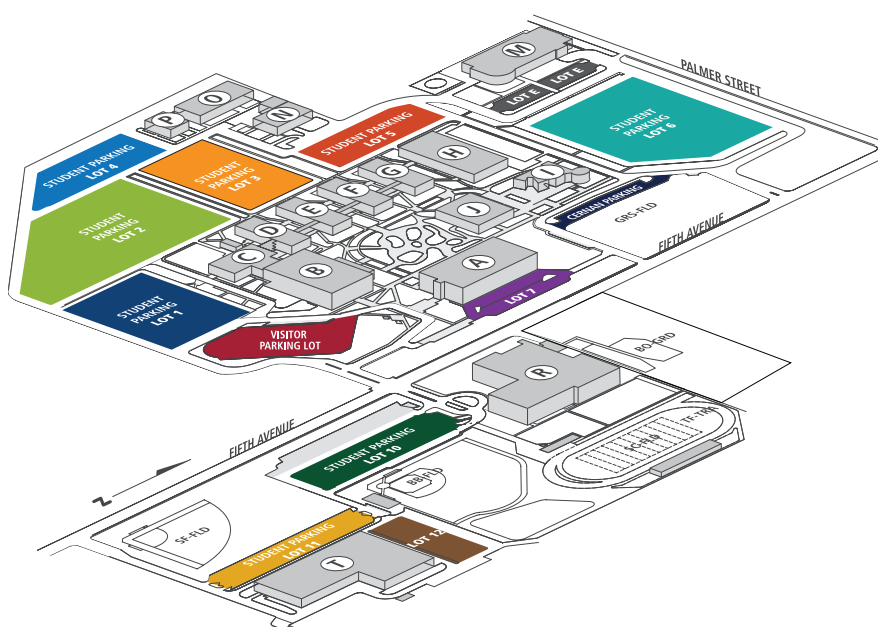

Lifelong Learning

Courses, workshops, seminars and conferences are available on campus and at convenient neighborhood locations to provide access to intellectual, social, cultural and recreational programming for adults, including seniors.

Youth Programming

From acting to astronomy and magic to mathematics, Triton College offers a constantly growing curriculum for children ages 7-15 in courses scheduled on campus and at select community sites. These courses complement and enhance regular school schedules and activities while engaging children's motivation to learn.

Look for the Spring 2025 CE Guide in your mailbox for a full catalog of course listings and offerings!
